A Helpful Supplementary Book

Leiper's Latin Subordinate Clause Syntax - - $0.30

By M. A. LEIPER, Professor of Latin, Western Kentucky State Normal School.

THE purpose of this reference manual is to aid second and third year high school pupils in getting [a clearer understanding of the various forms of subordinate clauses than is possible from the use of a grammar alone. It is intended to supplement, not to supplant, the latter, and consequently includes references to all the leading Latin grammars, so that the student may pursue his investigation further at any point.

Here is collected in compact, classified arrangement all the necessary information about these clauses and the various matters of syntax involved. This is at present scattered so widely, and hidden beneath such elaborate and difficult statements and beneath so many exceptions and illustrations in the grammars, that the student becomes thoroughly bewildered and discouraged.

AVES OF ARISTOPHANES

By JOHN WILLIAMS WHITE

8 vo, cloth, cxii+378 pages, $3.50

A scholarly collecting and editing of the old Greek commentary on Aristophanes's "Birds". The introduction presents a brief History of Annotation with special reference to comedy. The body of the work comprises a literal transcript of the Commentary found in the Codex Venetus 474 of the eleventh century and beneath this a collation of the five other manuscripts and of the first printed edition, and, facing transcript and collation, the restored text and notes. The book has been fully indexed by Professor Edward Capps of Princeton University.

Widely Popular Text-Books

A LATIN GRAMMAR, 337 pp. - - - $0.90
(H. E. BURTON)

This is a unique text because it is the only book on the market to-day which is sufficiently clear and simple for the beginner and also sufficiently complete and scholarly for the college student. Experienced teachers and professors are unanimous in their praises of this book.

CAESAR'S GALlic WAR, 495 pp. - - - $1.25
(GUNNISON AND HARLEY)

The contents of this book are so comprehensive and so well-organized that the pupil needs no other Latin helps during the second year. Four books of the Gallic War, Prose Composition, Sight Reading Selections and Grammar (with notes, vocabularies, etc.) make an unequalled school edition.

CICERO'S ORATIONS, 543 pp. - - - $1.25
(GUNNISON AND HARLEY)

A really superb edition of Cicero for school use, this book gives seven Orations, Sight Reading Selections, Grammar and Prose Composition. It is really four books in one. The illustrations are unusual and artistic.

Let your Latin Composition teach Syntax.

You can with the Baker and Inglis plan. Principle and practice are very closely allied. Each lesson consists of a definite assignment of some principles of syntax, a special vocabulary, a series of twenty-four sentences for written translation and an exercise for oral translation. A summary of the elements of syntax is included, which may be used for reference.

The sentences for written drill are divided into two groups, of which twelve may be used for written home work, and twelve for translation in the class period, thus providing a fresh review, in class, of principles worked out at home. For content and vocabulary, the sentences are based on Caesar's Commentaries and the Orations of Cicero read in the schools.

The course is divided for three years, the last of which is devoted to review of all the principles, and to practice in writing connected Latin.

Try it with BAKER AND INGLIS'S HIGH SCHOOL COURSE IN LATIN COMPOSITION.
